Reviews

It is fantastic and great. It is written in easy words and phrases instead of confusing. I am just delighted to explain how this is actually the best book I have ever read through during my individual life and might be the finest publication for ever.

Excerpt: . . . the Office Protractor. The limb c d of the bevel is made to be taken a part at h by drawing c h out of a brass socket fastened to h d, for the purpose of packing it in the box. On each side of e d scales of equal parts may be made. In order to keep the bevel in its position against the edge of the protractor a small button i k is made to project on it from the groove and to be turned down in the direction i l to lie below the moveable limb when folded down. - This instrument, although not quite so expeditious in its operation as the Office Protractor, is yet so vastly superior to the common protractor, that surveyors who have had it in use have considered it such an essential part of their equipment for the Woods, that no consideration could have induced them to be without it. A Letter from Robert R. Livingston, Esq. President of the Society, and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States in France, to Benjamin De Witt, M. D. of Albany, ON THE USE OF PYRITES AS A MANURE, Paris, Qtb October, 180. 2. Dear-Sir, i. HAVE it not yet in my power to reduce to any order the few observations I have been able to make K on the agriculture of such parts of Europe as I have yet seen; which, however, I shall do, I hope in...
