It gives me pleasure to say that the work of this department has been of great help to the farmers of the State. An evidence of this fact is that the farmers generally are doing better farming than ever before in the history of the State. Farmers institutes have been held in different parts of the State, and the success of these institutes has been extremely gratifying. One of the best evidences of this is the frequent requests for another institute where one has been held. There are several experiment stations, established by this department, in the State that are doing good work, and the farmers are taking much interest in them. You have noticed that some farmers made, the present year, more than 160 bushels of corn to one acre. I predict that in the next ten years the average corn crop of this State will be at least thirty-five bushels to the acre. There is also a great improvement in grasses and live stock throughout the State. In conclusion, I must say that the employees of this department deserve great credit for the faithful discharge of their duties of the department.
