Excerpt: . APPENDIX OF NOTES. M ote.a. The decisions in England and America, about the necessity of a trial and condemnation in port, of a captured vessel, before the captor can in any way legally dispose of her, are very numerous. It is believed there is no dispute about that. The point of dispute is about the right to destroy. (See Note B). General Halleck, in his work on International Law, p. 278, sums up thus: As England became more commercial, it became her settled policy to regard the property of a captured vessel as not changed without a regular sentence of condemnation pronounced by a court of competent jurisdiction, and the title from the time of capture until such condemnation, in abeyance, and not capable of being transferred. This principle is not only recognized in her prize courts, but is now firmly incorporated into...
